Subsidies in social sectors

3146. SHRI NARENDRA MOHAN: Will the Minister of FINANCE be pleased to state:

(a) whether the subsidies both implicit and explicit given by Government to States have been instrumental in servings the social purpose to the extent envisaged;

(b) if not, what are the social sectors where the desired results have not been achieved; and

(c) whether Government are thinking of scrapping subsidies in the social sectors where these have failed to serve the expected purpose?

THE MINISTER OF STATE IN THE MINISTRY OF FINANCE (SHRI BALASAHEB VIKHE PATIL): (a) and (b) the most visible social purpose served through the Central Government's subsidy expenditure is seen in the State Public Distribution System, where a very large share of States' poor population is supplied foodgrains and kerosene at substantially below the market price. There are, however, some States where lifting of allocated stocks has been fairly high and therefore coverage of, and benefits to poor population is much wider compared to some States where record of lifting of foodgrains from the Central Government is poor.

(c) whereas there is no proposal before the Government for scrapping subsidies, yet it is the constant endeavour of the Government to contain the subsidies within the budgetary provisions as part of prudent fiscal management.
